MC ELROY SIGNS PARTNER DEAL WITH CLAY TABLET TECHNOLOGIES
Partnership Brings State-of-the-Art Translation Integration System to McElroy

AUSTIN, TX, 29 May 2008 McElroy Translation, a full-service language service provider with 40 years of experience, has penned a partnership deal with Clay Tablet Technologies, a provider of unique integration software that connects any content management system (CMS) with any translation system.

By joining Clay Tablet's global channel partner network, McElroy Translation will be able to expand its technical expertise in language and localization services by offering the ability to connect any of its clients' content management systems with any translation technology, including its proprietary system, ELJOTS.Force.

"The McElroy technology solution is designed to provide efficiencies that make translation projects easier and quicker for translators, thereby reducing costs and delivery time for customers," said Bob Donaldson, Vice President of Strategy at McElroy. "Clay Tablet Technologies' sophisticated integration software is a critical piece of our overall technology strategy, bringing flexibility and scalability to large translation projects."

"We're thrilled to be working with McElroy," remarked Robinson Kelly CEO of Clay Tablet Technologies. "That an LSP of McElroy's sophistication has selected Clay Tablet 2.0 as a key technology to provide translation efficiency is an exciting prospect for both Clay Tablet and our mutual clients. This further entrenches Clay Tablet's position as the connectivity platform for the translation industry."
